To Whom It May Concern,

It is with great pleasure that I write to recommend Andres J. Rodriguez, who worked under my supervision in the FIU Thrive Project at the Herbert Wertheim College of Medicine. Andres has been an exemplary team member whose contributions have been invaluable to the success of our projects.

Throughout his tenure with the project, Andres demonstrated exceptional communication skills, effectively balancing the ability to follow instructions with the confidence to voice concerns and suggest innovative directions for our initiatives. His insights were always well-thought-out, significantly enhancing our collaborative efforts.

Andres' ability to work independently without the need for micromanagement was especially commendable. He consistently managed his responsibilities with a high degree of professionalism and initiative. During meetings, Andres was adept at structuring ideas clearly and effectively, which facilitated smooth progress and helped drive our project forward.

Moreover, Andres' collaborative spirit and professionalism made him a joy to work with. His positive attitude and team-oriented approach were infectious, often inspiring others within the team to strive for improved outcomes.

I am confident that Andres will bring the same level of excellence, dedication, and teamwork to any future role as he has shown here at FIU. He is a capable and reliable individual who will undoubtedly be a valuable asset to any organization.
